International litigation, sometimes called transnational litigation, is the practice of litigation in connection with disputes among businesses or individuals residing or based in different countries. The main difference between international litigation and domestic litigation is that, in the former, certain issues are more likely to be of significance — such as personal jurisdiction, service of process, evidence from abroad, and enforcement of judgments.

International Litigation - Wikipedia

Transnational litigation often involves parties in a U.S. court who are seeking evidence that is located abroad.3The approach to this type of discovery may vary depending on whether the evidence sought is in the possession of a party or a non-party. Foreign states are often unfamiliar with and wary of U.S. discovery practices.
